Dermatopathology is specially focused to diagnose and observe the diseases of skin as well as infectious, medical specialty, chronic and neo-plastic diseases. Dermatopathology involves in the microscopic examination, description and interpretation of diagnostic assay specimens obtained from the skin. A dermatopathologist perform microscopic observation and also suggest the identification of the actual disease. The interpretation of skin specimens is difficult and tough, as the several various inflammatory skin diseases share identical basic inflammatory method or pattern. The ultimate identification needs clinical input and also clinic pathological correlation. In some cases, extra specialized testing must be performed on the biopsies, as well as technique, assay, microscopy, flow cytometer, and molecular-pathologic analysis.
