Abstract

Introduction: Prostate cancer is the second most common cancer and the fifth leading cause of cancer-associated mortality among men worldwide.¹ Screening for prostate cancer with serum prostate-specific antigen (PSA) aims to detect prostate cancer at an early, intervenable stage amenable to curative treatment and reduction in overall and disease-specific mortality.

Purpose: to demonstrate that patients in treatment of prostate cancer with androgen deprivation therapy that cannot normalize completely the prostate-specific antigen has a chakra's energies deficiencies and the replenishment of these lack of energy can lead to normalization of this exam.

Methods: two cases reports. The first with 59 years-old and the second with 69 years old, in treatment of prostate cancer with androgen deprivation therapy post prostate cancer surgery. The prostate specific antigen in both patients were very high in the beginning of the treatment (more than 24 mg/dl) but were reducing gradually with the androgen deprivation therapy but cannot normalize completely. Both patients search for Chinese medicine treatment to treat their pain in the hip (first patient) and the second went to treat the vitiligo in both hands. They were submitted to chakra's energy measurement and all chakra's of both patients were in the lowest level of energy (1 out of 8) and begin the treatment with Chinese dietary counseling, auricular acupuncture with apex ear bloodletting and highly diluted medications (homeopathy according to the theory Constitutional Homeopathy of Five Elements Based on Traditional Chinese Medicine and crystal based medications).

Results: both patients normalize completely their laboratorial exams after these treatment (the first in three months and the second in four months).

Conclusion: patients in treatment of prostate cancer using androgen deprivation therapy that cannot normalize completely the prostate-specific antigen should measure the chakra's energy meridians and start to replenish them with highly diluted medications and correct the diet, and rebalance the internal energies through auricular acupuncture and apex ear bloodletting.
