Abstract

iMedPub Journals
http://www.imedpub.com

Journal of Animal Research and Nutrition

2022
Vol 7. No. S2

Crown fractures in small animal dental practice

Eslam Hendy
Zagazig University, Pakistan

Abstract

There is no dought that veterinary dentistry has been a developing field through years specially in small animal practice , as animal grow older develop more both dental and periodontal problems either due to diet or acquired causes such as trauma leading to to some serious problems as crown fracture and even jaw fracture. In this article focusing more on crown fractures as a commonly presented problem to small animal clinics around the world easy to observe but to deal with the case properly to avoid some serious complications and to help maintaining the tooth function other than extracting the tooth, how to diagnose the case properly ,types , complications and proper treatment is the main aim of this article.

Biography

Eslam Hendy, graduated from veterinary school (class of 2019), Zagazig university and started a career in the faculty of veterinary medicine at the same university at the department of veterinary surgery,anesthesiology and radiology. Started master degree at the speciality of small animal dentistry with an over a year experience at small animal dentistry and dental procedures.

© Under License of Creative Commons Attribution 3.0 License