Dear Colleagues,

With proud and honour we launch the inaugural issue of our first online publication for the Journal of Genetic Disorders.

With the increasing rate of genetic disorders among all living creatures in the past few years it is becoming a critical need for more and advance scientific researches. Searching for causes, sequel, and treatment of Genetic disorders can help in avoiding or decreasing the rate of such cases in the community. Such studies should be published on a wide scope and it should be accessible to everyone that may get use of it. In the journal of Genetic disorder this is our mission, our journal is officially an Open Access, peer-reviewed, scholarly research journal which aims to share the latest and advance information, studies and researches related to causes, diagnosis and treatments of molecular and genetic disorders. It publishes the most complete and reliable source of information in the mode of original articles, review articles, case reports, short communications, etc. Each submitted paper goes through a fast track review and if accepted, a fast track copy editing process follows. Accepted papers are published online at the minimum time required. All the accepted articles are made available online to any internet user for free. You will become part of an active and open minded social network of authors, readers and editors.

We have a reasonable Article Processing Charges (APCs) for publishing open access. In addition, our journal offers a generous discount on the Article Processing Charges (APCs) that can be offered in certain circumstances.
